NOTE: Requirements for professional licensure vary among states. The University of Massachusetts Global has provided state licensing guidance here and on the program webpages and makes every effort to ensure licensure information is current. However, licensure regulations are subject to change. Therefore, UMG strongly encourages you to contact the state licensing board where you intend to seek licensure to ensure the program will meet the state's licensing requirements.

Finally, completion of a UMG program does not guarantee employment or licensure. Some state laws require a criminal background check, which may disqualify an individual from obtaining licensure. Field experience sites may require background checks before accepting students for a practicum or internship position. It is your responsibility to determine if your own circumstances pose such barriers.

Students outside of the United States, including in US Territories are encouraged to contact an advisor to discuss licensure matters in more detail.
